WHAT IS CLAIMED IS:

1.   A method of managing the use of keys in a cryptographic co-processor, which comprises the steps of:

selecting a key from one of a symmetrical key type and an asymmetrical key type; selecting a bit length from the selected key;

generating the key; and representing the key in one of an external form and an internal form.